Environmental Stewardship & Management

Our mission, at its core, is about providing people with the information and tools they need to make sound land use decisions and practice sustainable natural resource management. For the last twenty years, Audubon International has focused on providing educational services and programs directly to the people who can make change happen. In addition to our programs, our staff is increasingly involved with education and advocacy efforts. Through the Environmental Stewardship & Management Initiative, we seek to foster an ethic of environmental stewardship and help people improve the way they manage resources so they can make a positive difference in contributing to a more sustainable world.

Partnerships

As a not-for-profit environmental organization, Audubon International relies on support from partner organizations and corporations to provide essential funding for our programs and initiatives. These partnerships create new ways to make change happen and our sponsors' support allows our staff to deliver the programs and expertise necessary to make a difference. By aligning your company with AI and our members you enhance your role as an active voice within the Environmental Stewardship & Management movement. We hope you will join us!

Benefits

In addition to knowing you are supporting efforts to help people help the environment, being an Initiative Sponsor provides several benefits that may include name and logo placement in publications, newsletters, website and other outreach and education efforts and events, as well as use of the Audubon International logo within guidelines. Please contact our development office for details.
